<td>The recommendation is accepted.&lt;br&gt;On 11 May 2019 the Minister for Child Safety, Youth and Women and Minister for the Prevention of Domestic and Family Violence responded:&lt;br&gt;The Department of Child Safety, Youth and Women contracted LivingWorks Australia, a suicide intervention training company, to deliver suicide awareness training for workers from women’s shelters across the state. The first round of training commenced in January 2019 and was delivered through to March 2019 covering ten locations, focusing on suicide awareness. The Cairns and Mount Isa workshops specifically targeted shelter staff working with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples.&lt;br&gt;Subsidies were available to support staff from women’s shelters in remote locations to attend. Where possible and dependent upon demand from women’s shelters, training places have been made available to workers from other specialist domestic and family violence services. The next round of training will focus on suicide intervention with ten workshops being delivered across Queensland. Training will commence in May 2019 and delivered through to June 2019.&lt;br&gt;Following completion of the training, the department will work with the domestic and family violence sector regarding the development of a suicide prevention framework for implementation within domestic and family violence women’s shelters.</td>

In response to the Not Now, Not Ever report, Queensland Health is implementing the domestic and family violence (DFV) toolkit of resources to support health professionals understanding, and response to clinical presentations, of domestic and family violence. The DFV toolkit is available to both public and private health professionals, including all hospital and health services. The DFV toolkit includes a face-to-face training module, two online training modules, and a number of downloadable resources that address issues related to assessing risk within the health context. Additional resources have been developed to guide health professionals’ understanding of DFV information sharing and responding to presentations of non-lethal strangulation. Future training policy will be guided by Queensland Health’s review of the DFV toolkit and its implementation. The toolkit will be evaluated and recommended changes and updates implemented. A process evaluation of the DFV toolkit of resources for the health workforce found that the current structure and content of the toolkit represent high quality learning supports for the health workforce and identified a number of content areas for review and update. The evidence regarding the safety and efficacy of screening, assessment and managing DFV risk in clinical environments has been considered and the toolkit resources are being updated to guide practice in this area. In response to the Not Now, Not Ever report, Queensland Health is implementing the DFV toolkit of resources to support health professionals understanding, and response to clinical presentations, of domestic and family violence. The DFV toolkit is available to both public and private health professionals, including all hospital and health services. The DFV toolkit includes a face-to-face training module, two online training modules, and a number of downloadable resources that directly address risk factors for DFV. Additional resources have been developed to guide health professionals understanding of DFV information sharing and responding to presentations of non-lethal strangulation. Future training policy will be guided by Queensland Health’s review of the DFV toolkit and its implementation. The toolkit will be evaluated and recommended changes and updates implemented. The toolkit will be promoted statewide.

Recommendation 2c - Mandatory training of Queensland Health staff
That the Department of Health introduce mandatory training for staff who may come into contact with victims and their children or perpetrators of domestic and family violence. The training should be delivered to a standard (or level) that proficiency can be measured. This should cover comprehensive discharge planning and follow up care that takes into account the safety of both self and others, including appropriate referrals.

Queensland Health
The recommendation is accepted in principle.
On 22 July 2019 the Minister for Health and Minister for Ambulance Services responded:
As per the direction provided in the DFV toolkit, clinicians in the public health system are expected to use sensitive enquiry and routine asking when discussing DFV with clients/patients/customers. Where a disclosure of DFV has been made by a client/patient/customer, health clinicians will (with consent) engage a hospital/health service social worker who will discuss support options and make appropriate facilitated referrals prior to discharge. Following evaluation and review, the DFV toolkit will be promoted across Queensland’s health system to further embed safe and appropriate responses to DFV.

Recommendation 2d - Mandatory training of Queensland Health staff

The recommendation is accepted in principle. On 22 July 2019 the Minister for Health and Minister for Ambulance Services responded:

Queensland Health allocated more than $7 million in 2018-19 from Indigenous-specific making tracks funding to support child and maternal health services for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander families in both hospital and health services and the non-government sector.

An Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Maternity Services Strategy is currently in development that aims to strengthen culturally capable maternity services through continuity of midwifery care, expand the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander maternity workforce, and increase access to antenatal and parenting programs.

On 28 October 2019 the Minister for Health and Minister for Ambulance Services responded:

Queensland Health is finalising the Growing Deadly Families: An Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Maternity Services Strategy 2019-2025. The strategy aims to improve partnerships and leadership, continuity of care/carerer and embed Indigenous workforce and support into maternity services. Queensland Health will work with hospitals and health services and the non-government sector to implement, embed and strengthen maternity services for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander babies and their mothers. A plan outlining Queensland Health’s approach to implementation of the strategy is currently in development. The strategy is scheduled for release in late 2019.
| Recommendation 5- Routine screening for DFV by obstetricians and gynaecologists | Queensland Health | The recommendation is accepted.
On 22 July 2019 the Minister for Health and Minister for Ambulance Services responded:
The DFV toolkit includes training and resources that promote routine screening and enhanced responses to high risk and vulnerable families. Queensland Health liaised with RANZCOG through every stage of the DFV toolkit’s development.
In 2016, RANZCOG representatives participated on the DFV working group that developed the DFV toolkit, and in 2017-18 on the antenatal screening working group that developed the Antenatal screening for domestic and family violence guideline that was published and promoted by Queensland Health in May 2018. Queensland Health continues to work with RANZCOG and a RANZCOG representative is currently participating on the evaluation reference group on the current process evaluation of the DFV toolkit.
Following evaluation and review, the DFV toolkit will be promoted across Queensland’s health system to further embed safe and appropriate responses to DFV. |

| Recommendation 6- Priority alcohol and other drug treatment for high risk or vulnerable parents | Queensland Health | The recommendation is accepted in principle.
On 22 July 2019 the Minister for Health and Minister for Ambulance Services responded:
As part of the 2018-19 state budget, the Queensland Government committed $9.5 million to deliver a new 42-bed alcohol and other drug residential rehabilitation and treatment facility in Rockhampton. The facility in Rockhampton will provide increased access to treatment for people 18 years and over experiencing problematic substance use living in the central region of Queensland.
The planned facility will include 32 residential rehabilitation beds, 8 withdrawal (detox) beds, 2 family units (to accommodate parents and children) and capacity for a non-residential rehabilitation program (day program). The two-family units at the facility will be designed to provide residential treatment for families. This is to enable parents, including single parents or couples with young children in their care, to undertake intensive and structured residential-based treatment. During the program, children can either be cared for by dedicated child care workers, or attend local day care, pre-school or school during the day.
A detailed business case is underway and construction is expected to commence in late 2020. A specialist non-government organisation will be procured through a tender process to deliver services at the facility.
On 28 October 2019 the Minister for Health and Minister for Ambulance Services responded:
Queensland Health is continuing plans to develop a 42-bed alcohol and other drug residential rehabilitation and treatment facility in Rockhampton. |
Recommendation 7 - Routine mandatory DFV victim and perpetrator screening in mental health, alcohol and other drug services

That the Department of Health implement processes for routine mandatory screening for domestic and family violence victimisation and perpetration, within all Queensland Health and government funded mental health, and alcohol and other drug services. These should be supported by clear local pathways to specialist support services and appropriate training on the intersection between domestic and family violence, mental health and substance use which accords with the National Outcome Standards for Perpetrator Interventions.

<th>The recommendation is accepted in principle. On 22 July 2019 the Minister for Health and Minister for Ambulance Services responded: Queensland Health has worked with a range of clinical stakeholders to review and modify a suite of clinical documents for services. The mental health risk screening tool was reviewed and deemed to suitably acknowledge factors contributing to domestic and family violence. New resources are now under development to support the use of the clinical documents for example a user guide that will include more detailed guidance for clinicians and services undertaking risk screening. Queensland Health provides a range of training programs for mental health professionals and other health professionals who are seeking core mental health education. In 2019 Queensland Health is undertaking a detailed review of two courses, QC9 Critical components of risk assessment and management and QC14 Mental health assessment, providing the opportunity to include more detailed and contemporary content regarding the identification and reporting of DFV. On 28 October 2019 the Minister for Health and Minister for Ambulance Services responded: In 2019 Queensland Health developed an information guide that provides information and resources to clinicians that will enhance their capacity to support consumers, their families, and carers who have been identified as being at risk of violence, including DFV. The information guide will be released for use by clinicians in late 2019. The Queensland Centre for Mental Health Learning has reviewed the Queensland Health training program QC9 critical components of risk assessment and management. The review focused on the delivery of more detailed and contemporary content regarding screening for the identification and management of risk, including risk relating to DFV, in consumers of mental health and alcohol and other drugs services. The reviewed training program is being piloted prior to release.</th>

| Queensland Health and Department of Child Safety, Youth and Women | The recommendation is accepted. On 11 May 2019 the Minister for Health and Minister for Ambulance Services and the Minister for Child Safety, Youth and Women and Minister for the Prevention of Domestic and Family Violence responded: The Domestic and Family Violence Workforce Capacity and Capability Building Service project, to support the DFV workforce across Queensland, is in the final stages of tender evaluation. Once established, the service will provide mental health training to the DFV workforce and will include a priority area focusing on service integration and working effectively in collaboration. The service is expected to be operational by mid-2019. The integrated service response (ISR) trials, including high risk teams (HRTs) are continuing, with six of the eight funded HRTs becoming operational during 2016-2017 and 2017-2018. A further two HRTs will become operational in 2018-19. | enhance collaboration, shared understandings and information sharing.

Training in the Domestic and Family Violence Common Risk and Safety Framework, risk assessment tools and changes to the Domestic and Family Violence Prevention Act 2012 around information sharing continues to be delivered in the eight locations. Queensland Health staff, including mental health and drug and alcohol service staff, participate in this training along with other participating government agencies and specialist domestic and family violence services. The Department of Child Safety, Youth and Women is actively participating in The Safe and Together Addressing Complexity (STACY) project since its commencement in November 2018. The Queensland site for this national study is Caboolture. This project aims to investigate and simultaneously develop practitioner and organisational capacity to work collaboratively across services providing interventions to children and families living with domestic and family violence and where there are parental issues of mental health and alcohol and other drug use co-occurring. The project is anticipated to be completed towards the end of 2019.

Queensland Health is currently undertaking an evaluation of the DFV toolkit (the toolkit) of resources available for health workers and clinicians in the primary, private and public health sectors in Queensland. These resources include a DFV training guideline which encourages hospital and health services, where possible, to deliver DFV clinical response training sessions in collaboration with local DFV specialist services. The guideline provides relevant information about specialist DFV services to ensure appropriate referrals to people experiencing DFV. The evaluation aims to produce qualitative and quantitative data that will support the department in determining if the toolkit is meeting its objectives to provide high-quality information and training resources that are useful and accessed by health workers and clinicians across the public health system.

The expanded information sharing provisions pursuant to the Child Protection Reform Act 2017 became operational in October 2018 with the aim of enhancing collaboration between services to ensure the safety and wellbeing of children. The Department of Child Safety, Youth and Women has published Information Sharing Guidelines to provide practical support and guidance to help services understand their obligations when sharing information under the Child Protection Act 1999.

Recommendation 9- DFV awareness training of all registered practitioners

That the Queensland Government liaise with peak professional bodies to recommend all registered practitioners who may come into contact with victims and their children or perpetrators of domestic and family violence, complete specialist domestic and family violence

Department of Child Safety, Youth and Women

The recommendation is accepted.

On 11 May 2019 the Minister for Child Safety, Youth and Women and Minister for the Prevention of Domestic and Family Violence and the Minister for Health and Minister for Ambulance Services responded:

The Department of Child Safety, Youth and Women and Queensland Health are developing a communication strategy to liaise with relevant peak bodies to recommend ongoing domestic and family violence awareness training for registered practitioners in the community and health sectors. It is anticipated the communication strategy will be finalised by the end of June 2019.

Peak professional bodies may include, but are not limited to, practitioners registered with the Australian Counselling Association, Australian Association of Psychologists, Australian Association of Social Workers, Royal Australian and New Zealand College of Psychiatrists and accredited relationship counsellors and mediators.

Recommendation 10 - DFV training of first responders

| Queensland Police Service | The recommendation is accepted. On 26 April 2019 the Minister for Police and Minister for Corrective Services responded: Through the delivery of its recommendations from the Not Now, Not Ever report, the Queensland Police Service (QPS) has enhanced a number of training packages to address identified gaps in training content related to DFV and continues to review these packages to ensure they are contemporary and reflective of emerging trends. The QPS has also progressed several specialist DFV training and education/awareness products, including:
- raising awareness and educating members about the seriousness of strangulation by including non-lethal strangulation scenarios as a part of the vulnerable persons training package, which was compulsory for sworn members up to and including, the rank of inspector and selected non-sworn members; including strangulation prevention training in recruit, first year constable and detective packages; working closely with the Red Rose Foundation to build an in-house knowledge and skill base to help embed a uniformed, best practice response during investigations; developing a non-lethal strangulation evidence kit for use by frontline officers in support | heightened risk of harm, such as those identified within this report.

- investing in the development of an in-house DFV specialist course, which is modelled on the South Australian Police version. This course will set the standard in training for DFV coordinators, domestic violence liaison officers and other domestic and family violence specialists, providing officers with a uniformed, best practice approach to investigating and coordinating a complete response to an incident. Rollout of the training pilot commenced in February 2019.
- in May 2018, the QPS released an online awareness product to assist members in engaging with the LGBTI community during sensitive and vulnerable situations, including DFV incidents.
- to help raise awareness about elder abuse, modules within the detective and first year constable training programs have been updated, as well as the operational assistance kit to include a separate component on elder abuse. The vulnerable persons training package included a component on elder abuse; training packages have been completed and delivered to Police Communications Centre operators and PoliceLink call takers; and a 5MILE learning product and an elder abuse OpStore product have also been developed.
- the QPS continues to review training packages to ensure they are contemporary and reflective of emerging trends. The QPS has:
  - extensively updated the Domestic and Family Violence Competency Acquisition Program (CAP) book to reflect new legislation, policy and procedural requirements.
  - updated the recruit training phase 3 curriculum to reflect changes to the interpretation of the Domestic and Family Violence Protection Act.

The QPS is in the process of reviewing and updating two training programs, however, these will be managed as part of standard business as usual practices:
- first year constable (FYC) – A further review of the FYC section, domestic and family violence training package to ensure coverage of best-practice in training for first responders in understanding dynamics of DFV.
- Constable Development Program (CDP) – a further review of CDP material will be conducted in September 2019.

Recommendation 11- Queensland Police Service access to DFV history of victims and perpetrators

Queensland Police Service

That the Queensland Police Service ensure that all first responding officers have timely access to electronically stored DFV history of victims and perpetrators.

The recommendation is accepted.

On 26 April 2019 the Minister for Police and Minister for Corrective Services responded:
available, current, relevant and accurate information held across their data systems in relation to a prior history of domestic and family violence, for perpetrators and victims; in a format which aims to enhance but not disrupt, an operational response. This should be supported by the implementation of strategies that emphasise the importance of this information to call takers and frontline officers, and how to better take this information into account when responding to domestic and family violence related occurrences, particularly repeat calls for service.

Through the delivery of its recommendations from the Not Now, Not Ever report, the Queensland Police Service (QPS) has made enhancements to QPS systems, policy and procedures through ongoing investment in business improvement initiatives to ensure persons affected by DFV have the courage and confidence to report incidents of DFV to police. These enhancements included:

- improved business processes associated with administering DFV through the release of the new DFV functionality within the Apple iPad QLiTE devices
- the QPS and the Department of Justice and Attorney General worked collaboratively with other police and court jurisdictions from across Australia to deliver a national scheme that automatically recognises and enforces domestic violence orders (DVOs) made in any state or territory of Australia. The National Domestic Violence Order Scheme, which commenced on 25 November 2017, has streamlined the existing service process, where interstate police and courts request the service of an interstate DVO to the QPS
- completed an evaluation of the DFV-Protective Assessment Framework to determine whether it was still fit for purpose for frontline officers. Based on the findings, a further body of work is progressing to enhance the framework’s effectiveness to identify individuals at risk of harm and prevent future offending
- commenced a trial of two domestic and family violence coordinators within the Police Communications Centre on 17 September 2018 for a 12 month period. Due to its success, the trial has been extended until 30 June 2019.
- a further review of the first year constable section, Domestic and Family Violence Training package to ensure an emphasis on the importance of information about recorded history of DFV and how to use this information to inform decision-making by first responders

This recommendation is considered implemented with the remaining bodies of work transitioning into business as usual work practices.

On 28 October 2019 the Minister for Health and Minister for Ambulance Services responded:

Hospital and health services continue to participate in the ISR and HRT initiatives using the common risk and safety framework and collaborated with agency partners in the recent evaluation of ISR and HRT trials in Logan/Beenleigh, Mt Isa and Cherbourg.

As noted in the implementation update on recommendation 2(a) above, the evidence regarding the safety and efficacy of DFV screening and assessment in clinical environments was recently considered as a part of a process review of the toolkit, and resources are being updated to guide practice in this area. The updated toolkit will be published and supported by a communications plan to promote use of the toolkit across the workforce. Following consideration of the final report of the evaluation of the ISR and HRT trials, Queensland Health will continue to work with partner agencies to further develop the trial approach to identifying and monitoring high risk victims, perpetrators and their children in the service system.

<td>The recommendation is accepted. On 11 May 2019 the Minister for Child Safety, Youth and Women and Minister for the Prevention of Domestic and Family Violence responded: The Department of Child Safety Youth and Women established a reference group of representatives from Family and Child Connect (FaCC), Intensive Family Support (IFS) and DFV services. FaCC services provide information and advice to people seeking assistance for children and families where there are concerns about their wellbeing and IFS services help families who are experiencing multiple and/or complex needs. The aim of the reference group is for services to develop strategies and resources aimed at enhancing collaboration between the family support and DFV sectors, and improving responses to children and families experiencing DFV. The reference group identified and is progressing a range of strategies including: • the introduction and implementation of a common DFV risk assessment framework for use within FaCC and IFS services • the development of practice principles and training to enhance DFV informed practice within FaCC and IFS services • the development of a toolkit for FaCC and IFS staff around what to expect when referring to a DFV service as well as a series of fact sheets to increase understanding of the roles of family support workers and DFV workers • strengthening the role description of the specialist DFV worker within FaCC and IFS services to ensure consistency within these roles. The digital self-service project will consolidate and improve access to information held by government agencies about domestic and family violence. The website will be a resource for victims, perpetrators, friends and family, employers and the general public. A specialist user experience design consultancy was appointed to the project and, following extensive research, analytics and consultation, a suite of prototypes have been developed and tested with end users, including bystanders and victims of domestic and family violence. An implementation plan for training in the common risk assessment framework in select FaCC and IFS sites will be finalised alongside draft practice principles to enhance DFV informed practice. The feedback from digital self-service user testing will inform necessary changes to the prototype. The department will then work with Queensland Online to build the solution.</td>

Recommendation 20 - Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander family violence strategy

That the Queensland Government, in partnership with community Elders and other recognised experts, develop a specific Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander family violence strategy as a matter of urgent priority. This work should be informed by the Queensland Government’s Supporting Families Changing Futures reforms, Our Way: A generational strategy for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and families 2017-2039 and Changing Tracks: An action plan for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and families (2017-2019).

The strategy should:

- be led and implemented by Elders and the community
- be informed by evidence and account for the various drivers perpetuating family violence
- focus on cultural strengths and family-centred services and programs
- recognise and seek to address the unique construct, challenges and co-morbidities of this type of violence
- have an urban focus as well as addressing the needs of regional and discrete communities

Department of Child Safety, Youth and Women and Department of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Partnerships

The recommendation is accepted in principle. On 11 May 2019 the Deputy Premier, Treasurer and Minister for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Partnerships and the Minister for Child Safety, Youth and Women and Minister for the Prevention of Domestic and Family Violence responded:

The Queensland Government undertook targeted consultation with key stakeholders regarding an approach to progress recommendation 20. The consultation supported the need for a new approach to responding to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander family violence, building on existing initiatives.

The Queensland Government is considering the consultation feedback, and will provide an update on progress in the next report.
f) complement broader domestic and family violence strategies and others of relevance including health, justice, education and child protection strategies where appropriate

g) embed trauma-informed approaches that recognise historical and contemporary issues include a tertiary response but provide equal focus and investment on primary prevention and early intervention

h) include a tertiary response but provide equal focus and investment on primary prevention and early intervention

i) include primary prevention strategies for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children which should be developed in consultation with young people to ensure their needs are met

j) be sustainably and sufficiently funded, noting the cost benefit to be accrued through reducing the burden on resource intensive services such as emergency departments and child safety services

k) include allied, wrap-around services to support the development and implementation of the strategy

l) be formally monitored and independently evaluated using culturally appropriate outcome measures, methodologies and providers. This should include a strong focus on building the evidence base and data around what works in this area.m) be publicly reported at regular intervals to increase accountability. This should include tracking the investment to ascertain whether it is proportionate to the current investment in crisis response.n) be supported by a governance body to oversee a co-design approach to the development and implementation of this strategy.
